Post-Dispatch to Give ABIII Returns at the Coliseum

NEGROES REFUSED Doors Open at 7 P. M. - Seats Free

HE Post-Dispatch has arranged to bulletin election returns tonight and to signal the result of the vote for President all over the city and its suburbs.

The Post-Dispatch has rented the Coliseum, as it did in 1912, and stereopticon bulletins will be displayed there as well as at the Post-Dispatch's new building at Twelfth and Olive streets. NO BULLETINS WILL BE SHOWN AT THE BUILDING NOW OCCUPIED BY THE POST-DISPATCH.

Admission to the Coliseum will be free and first arrivals will get first choice of seats, only boxes and a limited number of seats being reserved for special guests. Seymour's band will play. The building will be open at 7 o'clock and returns will be shown at that hour.

At the Post-Dispatch's new building, the bulletins will be shown from screens projecting over Twelfth street, beginning at 6 p. m. There will be moving pictures both at the Coliseum and the Twelfth street building.

Mrs. Thron is one of $25 women is East St. Louis who are registered voters, and who for the first time in their lives took an active part in a general election. She voted in the second precinct of the Sixth Ward, where women voters predominate, there being 25 women registered and 25 men.

The voting in East St. Louis was heavier than ever before, and at mose haif of the 25,00 registered voters had cast their ballots.

Owing to the greatly increased number of voters due to the enfranchisement of the women the ballot boxed were found at an early hour to be insadequate and the Election Commissioners were considering using barrels and other receptacles for the ballots wheathe regulation boxes became full.

In several of the polling places at 45 o'clock the Judges and clerks were using yardsticks which were thrust through the alits in the tops of the boxes to push down the ballots.

In several precincts, the box was filled to capacity and the judges were pilling the ballots on a table. This is a violation of the election laws, but the judges and clerks were instructed to handle the ballots in such manner by the Election Commissionera until other boxes could be obtained.

The women of the city were more active during the early hours in getting voters to the pollis. Many were seen driving their cars to the polling places with men and women voters.

ALL FACTIONS IN GERMANY ARE UNITED AGAINST A "PEACE AT ANY PRICE"

Herbert Bayard Swope, Recently Returned From Berlin, Explains Sentiment of All Classes-Administration Denies Conquest Is Objective in Ending War.

ARTICLE NO. 2.

An authoritative German statement, as approved by the Chancellor himself, of the objective in the war of all the belligerents; the four "ways and was flying the American flag when out" as the Germans see them; the truth about the secret attitude of Ger many towards Belgium.

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE, Recently Beturned From Germany, Where He Had Access to the Best of Official Information.

B ECAUSE the future looks so black; because the situation is so muddled; because doubt and conjecture attend every theory the Germans are building for the property of the conjecture attends and the conjecture attends are building for the conjecture attends are also as a building for the conjecture at a building for the conjecture attends are also as a building for the conjecture at a building mans are building for themselves today, they are, perhaps, more than any other of the belligerents, living in the present, disregarding possibilities and dealing with acr alities. They await a lightning stroke that shall cleave the dark cloud an reveal a brighter prospect, and while they wait they are attempting to for pulate the immediate objectives of the war as they visualize them and as eney read them into their enemies' plan

y read them into their enemies plan man nation, taken in consideration with the present situation, where the greater part of Belgium, a large portion of France and a good share of Poland are in our hards. And still we say that we do not fight for territory. Ann ation by conquest is no part of the German war. The lands we hold—the war-won gain may be used as bases for later operations of a different nature, but they were not fought for nor won through a desire to possess them. I have prepared a statement of these objectives after getting expressions from rarious members of the Government, in luding views that the Chancellor himself gave. I submitted the paper to Von Bethmann-Hollweg through Alfred Zimrmann, Chief Permanent Under Sec retary of State for Foreign Affairs, and one of the real big men of Germany to-day. While I am not privileged to give it as a direct interview with the Chan cellor, I can say that it represents the they were not fought for nor won through a desire to possess them. Once more—Germany is not fighting a war for conquest. Can the others say as much? France publicly de-clares her intention of possessina Alsace-Lorraine; Russia is bent upon official attitude of Germany. The form in which it is herewith presented was taken on after revision and correction by the Foreign Office, and it was returned to me after the Chancellor has seen it, by Herr Zimm ann, with his seizing European Turkey; Italy de-mands a part of the Austro-Hungaentire personal as well as official appro-

Similar to Chancellor's Speech. It was prepared just before the Chan-cellor's speech in the Reichstag on Sept. ticed between the substance of certain phrases of this statement and the Chanllor's official utterances. It reads:

many no TALK of peace. There are thoughts of peace—of peace with honor that shall secure to the emfore the great war, and that shall secure, further, the avenues of national growth and commercial expanentitled and to gain which they are making the great sacrifice. But these peace thoughts are rarely given voice now-first, because the nation is too busy making war, and, second, the nation feels that before peace can be talked about there must be someone to talk to about it and the Germans are not deluding themselves that at this time the allies are ready or willing to listen.

So, leaving the questions of peace to be settled at the green table and the causes of the war to be weighed by later historians, a statement ca made as to the actual objectives, an answer can be given to the question, "Why do the nations fight-what military and political goals are the belligerents striving to reach?"

Will Fight to Last German.

There should be no doubt in the minds of the neutral world or in the minds of the nations allied against us as to what Germany is fighting It can be reduced to a oneword formula-EXISTENCE. because it is an appeal to the first law of nature, self-preservation, the German people are fighting so nobly and successfully and uneonquerably The devotion and patriotism of the more than those sentiments that is holding the nation together, it is the great elemental force—the will to live against which nothing can prestroyed. For every German realise that it is not only his own existence which is being threatened, but the right and privilege of his children to develop the ideals of their heritage. through conquest. She is not carry-ing a sword in one hand and her cul-ture in the other, giving the world the choice between the two, as her enemies so frequently paint her. It never was a part of the plan of the war to add to Germany's territory through conquest, but it is possible that peace may necessitate a change of present boundaries of contiguous countries where such changes are in the nature of a safeguard to Germany's security, which in turn means a strengthening of the prospects of general and lasting peace. She is quite content to live peacefully, developing her own institutions and asking only that no artificial barriers originating in fear or jealousy placed around her. The right to live carries with it a corollary in the right to grow, and both these rights are now being fought for by

No Desire for Conqu However acute, albeit imaginary may have been the fears of those who at the outset of the war saw in Germany only a desire for con-quest, they must now be reassured by the solemn assertions of the Ger-cannot be for them. Are we to suppose that among England's objective is to "free' Germany? Is she waging a war of freedom for the German people? Perhaps the same sort of "freedom" that France threw off; the same sort of freedom that the American colonies ended by the Revolutionary War; the same sort of "freedom" she brought to India; the same sort of "freedom" that made her fight for the gold and diamond mines of the quiet, peace-loving Boer mines of the quiet, peace-loving Boer republic; in short, the same sort of "freedom" she is giving to Ireland at the point of a gun and with the edge of a sword. Let America but ask herself the question you have asked me: "For what are Germany and the others fighting" and she will soon perceive, if the question be hon-estly answered, in which hearts the lust of aggression lies and from whence comes the spirit of destrucnite peace plan. That is why members of the Government cons members of the Government consent-ed to a statement as to the objectives, but made saboo any theorising as to peace. There was a realization that formany, fighting defensively, was not fighting constructively, except in so far as she was fighting for her na-tional existence, and except in so far as this war might effectuate a new political freedom within the empire. Obviously, both of these clauses were were not ready to wag too freely.

Only Peace Generalities.

Peace is still a favored subject for the Social Democrats to revert to, but t is always vague generalities w it is always vague generalities with which they deal—an "Ehrenvolls Frieds" (peace with honor) is what they call it—but how it shall come about or what form it shall take no one since Liebknecht has dared to say. Liebknecht's sentiments were largely those of a peace-at-any-price man, he being a strong Internationality and willing to accept any condialist and willing to accept any condi-tions that might bring about the possibility of resuming work toward a world federation.

I can honestly say that even in the extremest wings of the working-men's party or among the most radical Socialists I found little or no sentiment supporting a peace at any price. All the views of these factions price. All the views of these faction were predicated upon a continuatio of the present German entity, could discover no disintegration of the spirit of nationalism. No matte how they might differ on the metho of conducting the war; no matter how they might differ as to the term of an eventual pence; no matter what criticisms they had to make among themselves, all of the 18 am more political parties that German; is cursed with were stiff-necked an unyielding in their determination to right to the end for Germany.

Ranney fired at his assailants, as his revolver, with four cartridges dis-charged, was found near his body. His position indicated he had backed up against a wall to defend himself against his assailants. He had no money on his person, and a diamond pin and gold watch which he wore were not taken. He closed his saloon and departed for his home at Fourth and Ewing streets, several blocks away, about 2:45 o'clock. FACTIONS IN GERMANY UNITED AGAINST A "PEACE AT ANY PRICE"

Continued From Preceding Page. "German peace." Prof. von Stengel whose name is widely known in Germany, was asked recently whether he believed the empire would par ticipate in future international con-ferences at The Hague. He gave 'No' as his answer, and said that such con-ferences would be unnecessary under a "German peace," which he defined as a sort of super-state in which the Germans would enforce order in the German "Overlordship," prosperous existence, especially for the neutrals, is submission to our supreme direction. Under our overlordship all international law would be and instinctively would give to each considered a great authority on inernational law and is credited with a close friendship with the royal house. It should be said that his views, while giving intense satisfaction to the Junkerthum, found no echo in

I found little knowledge and less sympathy in Germany of and for the plan of universal disarmament or of peace enforcing leagues. This propaganda seemingly has made little headway among the Teutons. They say that they want the end of the war to bring about conditions deeper and nore lasting than those supplied by changes in frontiers or diplomatic hrases in treaties, but they have no formula to offer as to how this world betterment and peace securance shall be brought about, and it cannot be said that the censors are especially desirous of permitting these lines of thought to be followed. For example, Dr. Alfred Fried's book, "The Resto-ration of Europe," which goes to the very root of these questions, is pro-hitited from being circulated in Germany. Dr. Fried, who was the 1911 is reckoned one of the great thinkers his residence in Berne. The main line of cleavage between the two dominant factions in Germany is to be found in the difference between "a peace with honor" and a "German peace." In the first class and the liberal thinkers generally, including the Chancellor, Zimmermann, Dr. Hellferich, Secretary of State for the Interior, and Dr. Solf, Secretary of State for the Colonies.

In the second class are to be found the Conservatives and the National Liberals, who, under the leadership of Bassermann and Stresemann, are representative of the reactionary influence in the empire and are closely allied with the old school Conservatives. They are the ones who want Germany to dominate the world; who want Belgium to be retained; who want portions of France held; who want Servia wiped out of existence; who want a large slice of Russia added to the Kaiser's dominions and who want also the resumption of a "ruecksichtlose" (ruthless) U-boa-campaign, pretending to believe that this course offers a sure way to a quick end and certain victory.

PLAY OF BARRIE TYPE

Grumpy-Like Old Man a Masterful Figure in Frances Start's Comedy.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

RUMPY—keen, choleric old Grumpy—has come back to the stage in the new comedy, "Little Lady in Blue," which Frances harr and her fine group of players presented at the Shubert-Garrick Theater last night. It took all Miss Starr's charm and skill, in her playing of the title role, to keep the old man from being the dominating figure of the performance.

In this feat, Miss Starr had the kind assistance of the authors, Horace assistance of the authors, Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyval (also the authors of "Grumpy"), who considerately gathered the old man to his well-earned repose at the end of act one.

This new Grumpy wore an Admiral's This new Grumpy wore an Admiral's coat and was called Sir Anthony Addenbrooke. Also, he lived in the days when gentlemen sprinkled sand over their letters, when ladies used charcoal foot warmers, and when both traveled by stage. But in appearance, save for the matter of the depth of a few wrinkles. admiral Sir Anthony, whom A. G. Andrews effectively portrayed, was the same character as the veteran lawyer who, as impersonated last season by Cyrll Maude, barked at everybody and solved a diamond robber mystery.

The problem which vexed the old Admiral's last hours was the future of his scapegrace grandson and namesake, whose taste for brandy, together with his eye for petticoats, had brought his career in the British navy to an inglorious pause. On his last journey, the old Admiral met Anne Churchill, who, for his comfort, gave up her room in Holes in Her Shoes. Anne Churchill's problem, it was clear ven before the old man arrived at the nn, was her own future. This young Englishwoman, left with £40 a year, more or less, had tried the life of a governess and had found that she was too good-looking for this work. "There's a twinkle in your eyes that's close to a wink," her faithful old nurse told her when she rehearsed her troubles, "and that's the last thing a governess should have."

She had fled from her last place, in Germany, in mid-February, to escape from a colossal German baron, father of the children she had been teaching. He pursued her to the little French inn, and sought to overwhelm, her with an offer of marriage. Though there were holes in her shoes, and she was borrowing half her passage-money across the channel from her nurse, she re-lected the offer.

The old Admiral, arriving just after the German visitor had gone, admired Anne because she was not afraid of tim, When his lawyer came to discuss his will, he insisted that Anne should his will, he insisted that Anne should remain, and should stroke his head as he listened to the legal recital. What she heard caused her, ones or twice, to forget her soothing task. The old Admiral was making secret provision that his grandson if he should reform and reinstate himself in the navy by the '29th of the following September, should inherit his £60,000. But the youth was not to know of this provision. He must to know of this provision. He must reform on his own initiative, and for the sake of the family name, or every arthing would go to charity.

Admiral Planned It Out.

Here, it later appeared, lay a deep-lyed plot of the old Admiral's strategy. He had learned from Anne of her own rather serious situation. He knew, too, hat only a woman's hand would ever call young Anthony out of the ditch. e gave Anne her chance, and the rest follows. She finds Anthony in the bar parlor of a Portsmouth inn. Her conduct in "cruising around without a convoy" brings severe criticism from obbledick, a tar of the Capt. Cuttle type, who is attached to young Anthony's waning fortunes. And surely her presence in the bar-parlor does re-quire all the excuses that her errand, or the playwrights' necessity, can give. A glimpse of "a girl of Portsmouth Town" shows the sort of femininity which was accustomed. Town" shows the sort of femininity which was accustomed to appear there. Anne gets Anthony away from his cups, and from Portsmouth and its petticoats. She persuades him to pay his debts, and she is helping him to study navigation when Anthony's superior officer, who has heard reports of his reformation, calls unexpectedly on the young man. It takes all her knowledge of the handling of mainsails and topof the handling of mainsails and topgallants to convince the incredulous naval captain. But the real crisis comes a few moments later, when young Anthony, learning of his uncle's conditional bequest, hears that Anne knew of it all the time.

Hardly an Adventuress. In the scene that follows, Anne reproaches herself as an "adventuress." That is a severe term, for one adventure, or rather one venture, does not make an adventuress. And if all adventuresses helped young men to reform the word would hardly have the harsh the word would hardly have the harsh sound it now has. Nevertheless, it is undeniable that she has had that 60,000 pounds quite clearly in view, and the only excuse she is able to offer to Anthony, and to the audience, is that she has come really to love him. It is at this point that Anthony takes matters in hand and disposes of his future in a manner that bears out his grandfarther's wish, and the remark of old Cobbledick. "He was an argumentative old man," said Cobbledick of the departed Admiral, "and he would have his way, even Up There. So that's how she came. He sent her.".

He sent her.".
In situation and dialogue the play is ch like the Barrie comedies, made amiliar by Maude Adams. The chief older may not have been written peuliarly for Miss Starr, but it is not asy to think of another who could inerpret it more pleasingly. Beside Anrews' work as the old admiral, there is great enjoyment in Jerome Patrick's daying of young Anthony, Carl Sauernan's portrayal of the German Baron, An Entire City Block-Olive and

GIRL'S ADMIRER KILLS HER, TAKES OWN LIFE

Double Shooting at Mascoutah, Ill., Attributed to Parental Objection to Their Marriage.

Andrew Donasky, 22 years old, a mi-ner of Mascoutah, Ill., yesterday shot and killed Miss Mary Jacklisch, 15 years old, at the home of Mrs. Anton Her-terich, in Mascoutah, where she was employed, and then shot and killed him-the man and the girl to their marriage is said to have caused Donasky's act. He called to see Miss Jacklisch shortly after noon and neighbors saw the cou-ple standing in the yard of the Herter-ich home and heard the girl's laughter for several minutes before the tragedy Mrs. Herterich said she saw Donasky draw the girl to him with his arm about her waist and while the couple stood in this position she heard a shot and saw he girl fall to the ground. Donasky hen lay down beside the girl's body and that himself in the right temple. Miss Jacklisch was shot through the head. Both were dead when persons aroused by the shots reached the scene.

Donasky and Miss Jacklisch were Russian immigrants and had been in this country about three years. They had

"LITTLE LADY IN BLUE" PLAY OF BARRIE TYPE

The scenic setting, though not elaborate, bears the mark of David Belasco's managerial skill. The program announces that Belasco intends to present "Little Lady in Blue" at the Belasco Theater, New York. A like amouncement was made last season, when David Warfield made last season, when David Warrield was sent here in "Van der Decken," but New York has not yet seen the latter play. It is easy to believe that Miss Starr's very happy performance will find the road to Broadway smoother than did Warfield and his somber Flying Dutchman play.

"Miss Dolly Dollars" I ses at the Park Theater. "Miss Dolly Dollars," with Florence Mackie in the leading role, greatly en-tertained the students and friends of Lenox Hall, who had bought up all the seats in the Park Theater last night. The musical comedy is pleasing, and Miss Mackie, who is in her last week at the Park, had one of the best roles which has fallen to her lot during her stay here.' James McElhern as the 'Educated Fool' was easily the hit of the performance, and he introduced several vaudeville specialties which added to the gayety. Before the performance and between the acts Lenox Hall girls sang their college songs.

Chinese Singer and Playlets on the Columbia's Bill.

A Chinese baritone singing an Irish ballad in English to the accompaniment of a German orchestra is one of the cosmopolitan features of this week's bill at the Columbia. Tang Cheong is handsome, for a Chinese, and he sings almost as well as an Italian.

as well as an Italian.

The headliner is Emmett Corrigan, and his little compared in a sketch entitled "The Van Lo Diamond." George Howell and company also put on a bright little 20-minute time-killer, "The Red Fox Trot." Nate Leipzig does card tricks and Svengale, an educated dog. tells the audience how old he is and gives other manifestations of intelligence.

Shaw's "Getting Married."

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 .- Distinguish names stand out from the bill at the Booth Theater, where a three-act com-edy, "Geting Married," had its introduction to the American stage last night. To begin with there is the name of Bernard Shaw, who wrote the play. To continue, there are the head of the preenting cast, William Faversham as the Bishop of Chelsea, and Henrietta Cros-man as a redoubtable and seductive Mrs. George. To complete the personal men-tion, there are Charles Cherry, Hilda Spong, John Harwood, Lumsden Hate. George Fitzgerald, Arleen Hackett, Hugh Dittman, Virginia Fox Brooks, Edwin Cushman and Herbert Belmoretalkative company. For this play, even more conspicuously than most Shavian efforts, is a thing of words and not of

As a matter of reading, "Geting Mar ried," has long been familiar over here In a book of Shaw plays, it follows preface more than 20,000 words in length. To know what Shaw is driving at, it is better to read through the prefat, it is better to read through the pref-ace than to sif through the play. And the play itself is at least as comfortably o be taken in cozy, sit-by-the-fire in-stallments as when occupying a long evening at the theater.

The plot is frankly farcical. The Bish-The plot is frankly farcical. The Bishop's fifth daughter is about to be married, when she and her husband-to-be are suddenly set aghast by enlightening pamphlets on the state of British marriage laws. Instead of a wedding, then, one comes on a debating society, with all hands participating, and the green grocer as a sort of referee, covering every phase of the question of marriage and divorce.

The first act is brilliant in wit and promise. The second distinctly drags. A great many hearers would be content to take the third as their measure of the play. The finely adequate company did everything that could be done to National City Bank of New York Predicts Foreign Commerce Will Reach $8,000,000,000.

By Leased Wire From the New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 .- On a basis of the complete figures for nine months of the year and returns of the port of New York for October, the foreign trade department of the National City Bank pre-dicts that the foreign commerce of the United States for the calendar year 1916 will approximate $8,000,000,000, or one-fifth of the entire international trade of the world.

It will be 50 per cent greater than that in 1915 and double that of the preceding year. The total was $5,325,000,000 in 1915 and $3,903,000,000 in 1914. The excess of exports over imports in 1916 will approximate $3,000,000,000 against $1,768,884.000 in 1915, $324,348,000 in 1914 and $691,422,000 in 1913. The statement adds:

Complete figures for the commerce of the entire country in the nine months ending with September are at hand and also those for the port of New York, an index of the port of New York, an index of the trade of the entire country, for October. The figures for the nine months ending with September, 1916, show a total commerce of $5,780,000,000 against $3,833,000,000 in the same months of 1915 and $2,877,000,000 in the correspondof 1915 and $2,877,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1914, the 1916 figures being thus 50 per cent greater than those of 1915 and double those of 1914.

1215 and double those of 1914.

October in New York Port.

"The October figures of the port of New York indicate that the total trade of October will equal and probably ex-ceed that of September, and should the two remaining months of November and December show totals similar to those of the past two months for which complete records are available, the total trade for the year would aggregate hearly or perhaps quite $8,000,000,000 in which the excess of exports over imports seems likely to be fully $3,000,000,000, against $2,135,776,000 in the fiscal year 1916 and $1,769,000,000 in the calendar year

"Both imports and exports will make a new record in the calendar year 1916. Present indications, based upon nine months' figures for the entire country, and an additional month for the port of New York, are that the imports for the full calendar year will aggregate approximately $2,500,000,000, against $2,-198,000,000 in the fiscal year 1916 and $1,-779,000,000 in the calendar year 1915. Exports seem likely to approximate $5,500,-000,000, against $4,334,000,000 in the fiscal year 1916 and $3,548,000,000 in the calendar

"This large increase in the foreign commerce of the country is not entirely due to increased quantities of merchandise entering or leaving its ports. The dise entering or leaving its ports. The fact, for example, that wheat which was exported in November, 1815, at $1.19 per bushel, is now quoted in the New York markets at $2 per bushel, suggests that the comparatively small quantity of wheat now being exported probably represents quite as large a value as did the larger quantities exported at this time a year ago.

his time a year ago. "Cotton was being exported this date one year ago at 12 cents per pound: now it is quoted in the New York mar-kets at approximately 18 cents. Copper ingots, of which the export price in June, 1916, was 27.5 cents per pound, were exported at an average of 17.3 cents per pound in June, 1915. Sole leather, now being represented at 40 cents per pound, was a year earlier only 30 cents, and canned beef, exported in Aurust at 23.7 cents per pound, went in August of the preceding year at

"Iron and steel billets, exported in August at $56.40 per ton, went in August of last year at $21.92, and structural iron and steel, exported in August of the ported in August of last year at $35.80."

Deutschland Commander Tells of Storm in Gulf Stream, a Phosphorescent Sea and Running Into Field of Floating Barrels.

THIS is the seventh chapter of with us and which would betray our location. On our side I had made arrative of the trip of the Peutschland from Bremen to Baltimore and return. The sixth installment told of the departure from Baltimore. The eighth installment will complete the narrative.

By Capt. Paul Koenig.

Commander of the Deutschland. Copyright, 1916, by John N. Wheeler. Inc. APT. HINSCH came along with his Timmins and drew alongside us, greatly relieved. His anxiety

I now placed the Timmins two see miles away from us, in order to have a final important trial at submerging. We wanted to rise without any speed ahead, so that only the periscope came above the surface of the water, a maneuver which necessitated great precision. It is much easier to rise while speeding ahead by not using the depth rudder and employing the dynamo power. But then the periscope makes a squirting foam on the sea, and this might betray us. We therefore tried arising with a pen-dulum-like motion from great depth by alternately emptying and filling the tanks and made an effort to reach such a position that the periscope only showed above the water.

The experiment was a success. We were able to show our feeler, the trusty periscope, without even Timmins, who knew where we had gone down, noticing anything until our conning tower showed out of the sea. Now I was certain we ere prepared for all possibilities and could venture to break through the blockade without there being any risk in spite of the fact Capt. Gaunt had anunced we were to be "surely" caught We continued our voyage and directed our course so we, after darkness set in, would be between the two capes.

Night Was Falling.
The night was falling. We had now eached the point where the danger lay. Ahead of us the steady light of Cape Henry was showing steadily, while on the port, with brief flashes, the intermittent rays from Cape Charles showed us our way through the darkness of the night. Directed by those guides, we approached the critical point and the decisive moment of our progress to sea. Suddenly two searchlight flashes glare over the water to starboard. The fingers of light sweep slowly over the surface of the sea, searching for us. Automatically I count a few seconds. Then the light flashes sharply in my eyes. It was too late to submerge. The treacherous light had found us, pick-ing out the whole of the Deutschland,

In the bright light furnished us without charge we could plainly see the expressions on each other's faces.

Then we noticed the shaft of light, turned twice perpendicularly against the sky.

and stuck to us. We, the two men in the conning tower, looked at each other.

selves to the darkness, we discovered to starboard two large ships with the ooks of fishing smacks.
"The scoundrels," Krapohl murmured.

When we had again accustomed our-

"Ready to dive. Go down to 18-meter

At the same time we changed our course, swinging off to the southward. After an hour and a half we again ome to the surface in order to take a look around once more and get our bearings carefully.

Hardly had I taken a look around for a minute when I immediately was forced to give orders to dive in a hurry, in order to avoid a threatening danger. The American cruiser detailed to do neutrality duty came for us at full speed hardly 200 meters away.

The cruiser had certainly seen the The cruiser had certainly seen the distinctive signals and now came to guard the sea boundary line. According to the American newspapers, he had previously been ordered to Chesapeake Bay to practice maneuvers with the destroyers and other craft of the navy, but I rather believe he had been sent to guard the three-mile limit when we were going out. Personally, I am certain that, if any attempt had been certain that, if any attempt had been made by the English to attack us within the sea boundary, then the cruiser would not have been content to stand by as an onlooker. Such an encroachment of the honor of the United States was not beyond possibilities—maybe it was stopped just by the presence of the American cruiser. In fact, a large Hritish cruiser had passed Cape Henry a few days before our departure and had entered Chesapeake Bay during the night, threateningly. Ho sneaked about in American waters and then he started on his way without letting it be known on his way without letting it be known

Meanwhile, we had quickly pressed our boat down into the deep, and we arose again only after the sound of the rropellers of the American had died out. We now knew that the most danout. We now knew that the most dangerous minutes of the entire voyage had arrived, and we again vary carefully looked around and took our bearings cautiously and made roady to break through. So we submerged and continued on our way under the greatest tension. We knew what dangers were lurking and it was necessary for us to keep cool. We were aware that fishing smacks had taken it unon themselves to put out nets with mines or maybe only with floating buoys which we would in any case drag along

Fur-Trimmed Velvet Suit, $25

Garland's famous $25 Suits have, for 18 years, been important to the women of St. Louis, especially to those who understand the fine art of buying.

But this unusually fine collection which we have ready for tomorrow is tremendously important to them. How much so lies in this fact:-There has never been, in all our 18 years of specializing in Suits, a showing quite like them. Never so grand an assortment of styles, a variety which will provide for all tastes and fancies-and it's the biggest $25 value, too.

FINE BROADCLOTHS, VELVET and plain and checked velours, poplins, serges and gabardines, with or without fur trimming.

Here Are Some of the Styles Your $25 Will Buy

A very fine Broadcloth Suit, in all colors; has long rippling coat gathered at waistline and is fur trimmed.

A smart poplin model has a yoke on the coat in back, with pleats gathered at the waistline.

A clever Serge Suit has straight pleated yoke back and belt and velvet collar. Skirt is cut full and flaring.

A few gabardines and serges have rather short coats, that tightly nipped-in waist-line. And dozens of other styles.

The fur used most is near-seal, Hudson seal and opossum; many are effectively set off with a liberal use of buttons, others with velvet, or strictly tailored.

100 $15.00 and $17.50 Suits at $1 Serges, gabardines, poplins and checkered mixtures. Coats silk lined, velvet and button trimmed, belted and shirred backs, fitted waistlines on some. Colors are navy, brown and black. Suits with style in every line. To make a quick disposal of the lot Wednesday

Don't Endanger It With Artificial Aids. When you wash a fine varnished surface you take a big risk. Some varnishes will go to pieces under such treatment. Another danger is the use of so-called polishes which impart a high gloss for the time being but which in time dry, check and crack the fine surface. Best results are obtained by the use of Tobay Polish—made from the secret formula of The Tobey Furniture Company (Chicago and New York), and used by them for cleaning and preserving finishes of varnish and enamel. The fact that a big furniture house uses Tobey Polish on its finest pieces is certainly full assurance of its safety and efficiency when used on the furniture and woodwork in your home. your home. Tobey Polish restores the life and beauty of fine furniture and woodwork by cleaning the surface and by keeping the natural finish in all its original newness. More than this, it renews the elasticity of the finish, preventing unsightly cracking and checking. Leaves no greasy film—no veneer. Wenderfully easy to use. No hard rubbing. You see the fine results instantly. And it won't collect dust. Try it on a chair or a piano. See the big difference. Use it on your automobile—see how it maintains the brandnew look. When we were about four meters below the surface of the water, it was just as if we had been in a light-filled, glowing medium. Just before the conning tower came out of the sea, I looked toward the stern and then saw the length of the boat as a dark mass gliding through the glowing elenent. A whirl of fire was thrown of by the propellers, and the motion of the boat caused in the surrounding waters with cascades of sparks and fire. I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULITZER. April 10, 1907.

Estimate of Woodrow Wilson.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Woodrow Wilson may not win today. The great loss will be ours, not his. Whether he wins or loses, he stands enshrined in the hearts of Ameri cans. His four years of strenuous labors will shed their blessings upon our beloved Government and its millions of citizens, when his present sleek detractors have become mildewed rubbish in their country's annals.

Woodrow Wilson may suffer defeat in today's battles of the ballots, but the leaven of his great work in behalf of his beloved people, Americans all regardless of creed and ancestry, will continue to ferment in every nook and cranny of corruption, until the blotches upon the Pace of the Goddess of Liberty have wholly disappeared, and its complexion is again restored to its pristine

When that day comes, as come it must, if our beloved institutions indure, Woodrow Wilson will stand the peer of Abraham Lincoln-par nobile fratum-in the history of our country. M. N. SALE.

There is no more reason or excuse for displaying such a sign than there would be for display signs entitled "Anti-Wilson Protestants," or -Wilson Jews." It conveys the insinuation that there has been a Catholic movement to deilson; and no one knows better than your self that such a thing is preposterous. Further into politics, one of the very things your paper has so often—and justly—condemned. H. To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHO SHOULD PAY FOR SCHOOLS?

A reader who says that the portable schools are a disgrace to the city opposes the school bond proposition because he holds that the money needed to build new schools should be raised in the same way as funds for street improvement or sewers are raised, namely, by taxation of the property especially benefited.

This is an unusual and reactionary viewpoint The public or free schools all over the civilized world have always been supported as they are now, by taxation of all the property holders in school districts in the country; and by taxation of all the property holders in cities jointly. Recognizing the general good of popular education, the funds so raised have, in cases of necessity, been added to by grants from county, state and even national Governments.

The existing St. Louis school buildings, including the high schools, have been erected with public money. They are the general property of all the people. Citizens are continually moving from one part of the city to another, but they feel dren. Newcomers are as welcome as old resi-

SENATOR REED'S PIGHTS

At the eleventh hour the Kansas City Post tells the story of the long fight made by Senator Reed to smash the sewer pipe monopoly in Kansa City controlled by Walter S. Dickey, Senator Reed's Republican opponent for the United States Senate. Senator Reed also fought Mr. Dickey's gas combine and helped to smash the Washington lobby of the Manufacturers' Association of which Mr. Dickey was a member.

Senator Reed has had the good fortune to be on the right side of the anti-monopoly, anti-privilege, anti-plutocracy fights. He is waging one of the best in his contest to keep Mr. Dickey out of the Senate where he could be counted upon to support the forces of privilege and plutocracy. He ought to win this fight.

SOME PUMPKIN!

"Why is so little said of the Missouri pump kin, easily the finest on earth?" demands a rural subscriber who has laid on our desk a specimen facile princeps of earth's finest which shall no remain for exhibition purposes but pass through savory and triumphant transmogrifications into baked and buttered slices-or is it roasted?-and its final apotheosis, ple.

Forsooth not enough is said, the half has never been told, of the Missouri pumpkin, upon whose voluptuous rind the frost now traces its silvery dreams. Missouri's is the direct descendant of the Mesopotamian pumpkin, that long before the dawn of the Christian era flowered and fructified on the fertile plains of Euphrates, where it was justly the object of idolatry, and whence, after a period of cultivation, it spread not only eastward to China, where it vied with Buddhism, but westward with cmpire, to Syria, to Europe, to the Occidental world, completing the circle of universal sway and establishing its throne, its shrine, upon the billowy bosom of beautiful Missouri, where, bathed in moonlight and sung to by the morning stars, it has reigned supreme over the vegetable kingdom and in the affections of a grateful people, among the proudest of their possessions, the fondest of their traditions, the inspiration of their poets, theme of paeans—some pumpkin, believe

STEINMETE'S "TRIBUNCIATE."

Charles P. Steinmets, the world-famous elec-trician, who is also a Socialist, tells, in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine, how the war will probably revolutionize industry and government verywhere, beginning in Europe. The picture of the future he draws is not especially inviting. As far as America is concerned, it will be a long nite, while others are nebulous. time coming true, if it ever does.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The manifesto issued jointly by the Emperors of Germany and Austria reinstituting the Kingdom of Poiand concludes with these significant words: "The exact frontiers of the kingdom shall be outlined later."

This language gives no hope that any part of the 26,000 square miles of Poland obtained by Prussia in the fourth or final partition of the ecuntry by the Congress of Berlin or the 35,500 square miles obtained at the same time by Austria will be included in the new kingdom in the future. And its extent in the present is limited by the manifesto to portions of Russian Poland now occupied by the Central Powers.

It is justifiable to recall that of the three Governments which were beneficiaries of Poland's dismemberment, Russia was the only one to make any attempt to satisfy Polish aspirations. Alexander I gave his share of the territory autonomy no matter where they may reside, that the public school there is their school, open to their chil- until insurrectionary disorders persisting from time to time until 1864 were made an excuse for depriving the Polish people of most of their privileges. Prussian rule of the unhappy Poles has been harsher than that of either Russia or Austria. A more liberal disposition toward them at Petrograd in recent years has been opposed at Berlin on the ground that concessions to Russian Poles would intensify the dissatisfaction among Prussian Poles.

Napoleon, too, created in 1807 the nominally independent Grand Duchy of Warsaw, which fell when he fell eight years later. The future of the new autonomous Poland that has come in being as a war measure may likewise be dependent on the fortunes of war, but the fact of its creation is highly interesting. Russia also has solemnly pledged a new era for Poland. If she wins the struggle, can she accord to them less than her enemies accord, even if it is accorded at Russia's expense?

LET'S TALK ABOUT THE WEATHER.

Instead of merely holding our breath until today's voting is done and the returns are in, why not talk about the weather? Did you ever see more delightful weather than we have been having lately? Or did you? Of course, it is something that people will differ about, which makes i: the better worth while discussing. Some think i has been ugseasonably warm for November, but the best minds concur in the oninion that if not perfect, still it might have been a whole lot worse. To paraphrase Lincoln, you can't please all of the people all of the time.

No less an authority than Senator Stone has remarked that the days from late September till early November have exhibited Missouri's show weather-tnat far-famed Indian summer which veils our automn with postic charm and color and mood. Every true connoisseur and lover of weather must agree that Missouri Indian summer at its best, on one of those days which Thomas Jefferson, with his fine discrimination in weather would have designated "Fair." (Thomas Jefferson kept a private diary on the weather in an ivory pocketbook, and he "distinguished weather into fair or cloudy, according as the sky is more or less than half covered with clouds") simply can't be beat. Missouri Indian summer has bee favorably compared with the softest weather that Italy knows, with all its connotation of picturesqueness and tones and tints. These have been nature's exhibition days for her richest and most feeling landscapes.

Really, the weather has been beautiful of lat

INFANTILE PARALYSIS AND AUTOS.

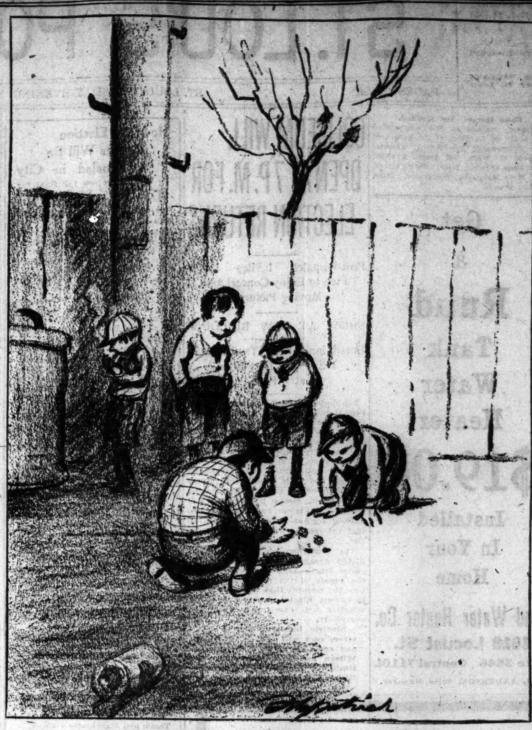

Dr. T. F. Hartington, of the Massachusetts State Health Department, told the American Pubin automobiles. He declared the symptoms of the disease and of poisoning by such fumes to be identical.

The ingenious theory is, perhaps, not to be per emptorily rejected. After years of study some of the ablest scientists in the world confess themselves baffled in attempts to account for the causation of the scourge or to indicate any reliable cure. In the present state of knowledge Dr. Hartington's hypothesis is just as good as anybody else's and has the merit of being defi-

SOCRATES SUMS UP THE CAMPAIGN.

CCRATES: Some of the people at the Agora last night thought I ought to sum up the campaign, and I consented to do so. I said that Mr. Hughes had a great advantage in the race. His party has about a million more votes than Mr. Wilson's party. It has to finance its campaigns the great industrial interests which are the beneficiaries of its protective tariffs. It has the country more or less wedded to that policy. It has the support of all those who are mad because Mr. Wilson has been pro-British, and all those who are mad because he has been pro-German.

Glaucon: You think Hughes ought to Win? Socrates: Yes. The only reason why I don't think he will win is that he is running against a great man. The Republican and Democratic parties are not alike in a campaign. The Republican party can nominate anybody and elect him under normal conditions. It did that with Mr. Taft. It has done it time and again. Mr. Hughes is weaker than his party. The Democratic party can win only when it is led by a very strong man. That is because the Democratic party, unlike the Republican party, has no principles stronger than the personality of the candidate himself. It has not stood for anything behind which there is a great supporting and financing interest no matter whom the party has named. Mr. Wilson is stronger than his party. Anyone less running on the Demo cratic ticket this year would not have a ghost of a chance to be elected.

Polemarchus: Quite so. Socrates: Very well. We witness then the remarkable spectacle of a man handicapped by everything holding his own against a man backed by everything of which presidents are made, I want very much to see Mr. Wilson win. Not because I do not think Mr. Hughes will make a good president. Not because I think he will get us into war. Not because I think Mr. Wilson is a better man than Mr. Hughes. I want to see him win because his opportunity is greater. He has an opportunity to continue the rehabilitation of the Democratic party-to put it on a parity with the Republican party. We need two great parties-not one great party and one collection of broad-brim hats and bag-pants. Given four more years, with a Democratic Congress behind him, Mr. Wilson will make the Democratic party something for the country to respect and young men to embrace.

Thrasymachus: Don't you think he has a very good chance to win?

Socrates: Of course he has. Every new thing in the world has a chance. For all we know the American people are going to be greater than their parties. too. If they are, Mr. Hughes is beaten.

Would you grieve if Hughes won? Socrates: No. I have said before that so far as tomestic record of Congress goes it doesn't make much difference whether the Democrats are returned to power or not. They have made that record, and the Republicans will not dare unmake it. As between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes in our international relations, they would both do the same thing. Neither wants to involve us in war. Neither wants to sacrifice our honor. Bither would want to do whatever this country can do to restore civilization in Europe. I have known all the time what Mr. Hughes would have done. He would have done what Mr. Wilson did. If Mr. Hughes wins, he is going to have my well wishes. He will need them, too. The lot of a neutral country just now is not a happy one, and changing Presidents isn't going to improve ours. He will be in hot water all the time just as Mr. Wilson has been, and if he keeps us out of it with as few burns as we have suffered under Mr. Wilson's leadership, he will be some President.

Polemarchus: That is about it, I fancy. Socrates: Thanks, Polemarchus. Now let us see if we can't get down a few more small lunch bets on the way it ought to turn out.

Most of us readily recognize the gilded, carved and highly ornamental tables and chairs belonging to the reigns of the Louis. In the case of chairs and settless handsome tapestries ordinarily chairs belonging to the reigns of the Louis. In the case of chairs and settees handsome tapestries ordinarily are used as a covering. But French furniture by no means is limited to such work. It runs the gamut from the exquisitely dainty to the solid Empire style, probably reaching its highest point in the superb simplicity of Louis XIV designs. The French first gave to the world inlay works, created by Boulle, and also introduced the finely painted and polished woods. There is an inimitable artistry about Prench furniture that quite distincuishes it from that of other nations. Colonial furniture is a term used to cover many designs. Strictly speaking, furniture of that period belong to the first American era, which ended in 1776, when independence was deliared. Prominent features of colonial turniture are high-backed, rush-botomed chairs, four-poster bedateads, and chest of drawers and massive threats. Mahogany was the favorite cood, and brass handles were widely sed. The round dining table with merous legs was another familiar of in colonial times.

Head Linesman Midkiff, in Affidavit, Reverses Ruling Made in Soldan Game.

PROTEST MAY BE MADE

Principal and Teachers of West End School Busy Gathering Evidence.

Students at Soldan High School are wrought up over the development that followed, yesterday, on the heels of the defeat of the school eleven 9-7, by the McKinley High School team, Saturday.

A strong demand that the game be pro-ested and ordered played over is being made by the student body, while the ns' Association has, on its own undertaken to gather evidence that will furnish grounds for protest.

The big evidence so far officially uncarthed is the fact that McKinley players were offside on a play that resulted in a touchdown and victory for McKinley. On this play Ronat broke through and blocked a kick, Schwertman recovered the ball and ran for a score.

man recovered the ball and ran for a score.

Head Linesman Midkiff, formerly of Colgate University, and now coach at Cleveland High School, ruled that the play was legal at the time. Yesterday, however, at the request of a member of the Soldan Patrons' Association, he made an affidavit to the effect that he had altered his view and that McKinley WAS offside.

In a subsequent explanation he is said to have stated that he was looking at his watch, at the time Ronat broke through, and looked up only in time to see the kick blocked.

dan Might Have Won.

Had this play been declared illegal on the field, Soldan would have held the lead, 7-3, at the end of the game.

President Charles Cunliff of the Soldan Patrons' Association was out of the city and no statement could be obtained from him. Coach Kelley of Soldan and Principal Powell of the same school both declared no protest had been made. Principal Powell intimated that if any action were in contemplation it would ollow evidence that was now being colected. He stated that he knew nothing of any meeting of teachers to consider a protest.

It is said that a meeting of high school principals would be called to consider the matter this week, but no contemplation of this could be obtained to-lay.

Dobie Still Unbeaten.

BELATED returns from the Northwest show that the Old Fox Dobie coach of the University of Washington eleven, is still untrampled. Dobie is in a clays by himself, when it comes to successful football coaching. For eight years his elevens have been supreme in his territory; and it is SOME territory, as football goes.

for the purpose of winning at football.

"Teams like Davidson, Citadel and other institutions unheard of in this locality, except through their football prowess, are making astonishing showings. That's because they enlist the services of these educated and so-called "tramp athletes" who are unwilling to give up the game after four years of collegiate battling.

"Georgia Tech fought hard to use Indian Joe Guyon, formerly with Carlisle, but backed out at the last minute. Tech, however, intends to work Joe next season.

"The heavy betting is responsible for hot-house development of many Southern elevens."

after two months he will work his way Bast. Last year he played 165 matches of 400 points each, a total of 66,000 points, on a similar expedition. This time Willie will play two daily exhibitions of 250 points, against Young Jake Schaefer or "Chick" Wright, two tables going airfultaneously, each player spotting the balls after a miss and continuing without cessation until the 250 points. It is figured that Hoppe will average about 40 minutes for this break. "Chick" Wright will lecture on billiards and Charley Peterson will do fancy shots at each performance. If a tourney of this kind is arranged it will be the first time in 10 years that the bowling championship of the country has been decided in this manner. The last event held in which the champions of the big tournaments was staged in Cincinnati, in 1807, Garry Herrmann, owner of the Cincinnati club and a big tenpin booster, paying the expenses of the visiting pin topplers. That event was won by Martin Kern of St. Louis who at the time was in his prime. He is the only St. Louisan who holds a world's title and is the only man who ever won his honors by competing against the champions of other sections.

If the application of the Municipal Athletic Association for member-ship in the Amateur Athletic Union is snip in the Amateur Athletic Union is in the hands of the A. A. U. officials by the time of the next meeting, which will be held on Thursday every specific to the Wolverines. They have a better idea of real football and if which will be held on Thursday every specific to the while in the final drive. cases is concerned, the "dope" in football holds good with truly remarkable accuracy. Here and there an upheaval happens which makes the form student think that his time is wasted; but the aggregate reassures him which will be held on Thursday evening, Tom Watts Jr., president of that organization said this morning that it would be acted upon favorably. This is all that remains now to bring the two local bodies, who have been at outs for the past three years, together.

At a meeting held last night by the Executive Committee of the Municipal Association everything decided at a joint meeting between the officials of the two circuits were O Kd and it was decided to bury the hatchet for the good of athletics in the city. Application for membership in the A. A. U. will be made in a day or two by the Municipal authorities.

This co-operation between the A. A. U. and M. A. A. will affect only basket ball, swimming, track and field and amateur boxing, although at present there is very little of the latter in this city. Right now the greatest interest is centered around basket ball and St. Louis this winter should see more basket ball than ever before.

And with the amalgamation of the two bodies, St. Louis for the first time in something like three years will have a quintet that can be called the real city champions.

The following table, including four weeks' efforts to line up the teams that ought to win, speaks for itself: Totals 208 157 38 13 805 Naming 157 winners, 38 losers and 13 ties out of 208 tries, with many losing games characterized in the re-marks as "close," ought to tell the story.

and Watts stated this morning that matters were coming around satisfactorily. The Municipal Association had not made any plans, but had expected to start within a week. They had lined up the Sunday School Association, which each season has several good teams.

Now all these teams will be divided into groups and will play under the same manner. After the regular campaign is ended, elimination battles will be staged to decide the city champion.

The winner of the fittle will then represent St. Louis in the champion.

The winner of the title will then represent St. Louis in the series to decide the Western A. A. U. honors. Louisville and Kansan. City are stready entered, while it is expected that Omaha will soon inform the officials whether it will be a competitor for the championahlp.

"I think the co-operation between the A. A. U. and the Municipal Association will work for the good of athletics in the city." said President Wafts of the A. A. U. this morning. "The application for membership will be acted upon favorably just as soon as it is received. Then we can go along and arrange matters for the coming basket ball campaign."

"We are going to try out the system of working hand in hand with the A. A. U.", said Rodowe Abeken director of municipal athletics. "It may work out all right and I hope it does, but I think the most logical system of setting together would be between the National A. A. U. and Honor Federation. The arrangement is to allow our members to compete in the A. A. U. events and those of the A. A. U. in the Municipal events, without being disqualified."

Washington's football practice was not strenuous last night as the players were nursing brulses acquired in the Michigan game. However, Coach Edmunds will inaugurate a strenuous schedule this afternoon and the befuf is expressed that Washington will profit immensely by its experience at Ann Arbor.

Former Mayor Kriesmann

Said: "It has been amazing to me that investors have ignored the rare chances that have been available at almost any moment this year. The only apparent explanation of this indifference of investors to exceptional bargains is that their attention has been diverted from bargains is that their attention has been diverted from real estate."

You probably saw his statement in the papers. Mr. E. Appelt made $500 profit on a cash investment of less than $50 through our office recently. You would be amazed to know the big profits on very small investments that have been made through our office in the past few months. I've got something right now—something very unusual for $100 cash—that will pay a profit of a thousand dollars in a few months, or I'm badly mistakea. Of course it will be sold mighty quick. If you think you might be interested, come in and see me right away.

Mollie of the

Movies By Alma Woodward,

SCENE: The Gloria Studios at 9 a. m DIRECTOR (wandering about with script in his hand)—I don't know what the boss is thinking of.

Great guns! When you can't even paper the house, in the legitimate, with a Shakspearean play, he goes and puts the guy on the screen. He ain't got any pep in him.

Camera man (with sophistication): Aw, why don't you do "Romeo and Ju-

Director (wildly): "Romeo and Juliet."
So many companies have done it now that you can't hire a balcony in the city.
Say, it's bad enough to do the one we're going to do—"Hamiet."

Camera man (briefly). I gotcha. Well, Miss Mollie says by the time she gets through making the alterations she's thought of for the scenario it'il have 'em hanging to their seats with excitement.

be done! Wasn't I advance man for a repertoire company featuring this gink Shakspeare out in the Middle West, and didn't I have to coax 'em into the thea-ter with sugar and everything to get even an intermittent audience: And if master like me can't do it, Mollie can't

is. Just for fun, don't say anything until we see what she's done. Good morning, Miss Mollie.

Mollie (gayly): Good morning, folks.
Gee, I passed a steepless night! I was making notes on this Hamlet thing until I was blind. But say, you wouldn't recognise the stuff, the way it is now.
I've changed it from the flattest kind of beer, really, into the fissiest kind of fiss. Gather round me, children, till I

Extra (coming up timidly); May I interrupt for just a moment? For 20 years I played the role of Polonius with the most famous Hamlets the stage has ever known. I have been told by Booth, Barrett and the more modern artists that I was their inspiration in the big scene. I would like to suggest—Director: (throwing up his hands): Suggest nothing. If I can get to it you can play the shadow of the ghost on the parapet, 'cause I see you're down and out an' I'm sorry for you, old 'unbut for the love of Mike don't suggest. We're trying to jack this writer up to we're trying to jack this writer up to some kind of speed as it is.

Mollie (unfurling the muchmarked script): Oh, I got the right line of dope all right. In the first place, to make it modern right off and get the audience remaining I wanted to give Hamile's at guessing, I wanted to give Hamlet's at-tire an ultra accessory. He was a mild boy, but the wristwatch is so overdone these days I had to substitute something newer, so he must wear a boodle bag below the left knee.

imera man (rudely): What in heck's

Mollie (gushing): Oh, one of those per-fectly divine little flowered silk things hed to a garter, to carry your bo next, brother! Go on, Mellie. A Mollie (peeved at the interruption): I'm fraid that person will have to retire inless he can keep still. To continue, as long as I am going to play Ophelia, I wanted the part to stand out-Ophelia is such a dub she's not an ingenue, or a heavy, or anything decided, for that matter—except a nut. So I've dug up a grand reason for her going loose in the thatch. Her father and brother have been killed at Verdun and—

Director (expostulating): Verdun! Buthat's now, and Hamlet lived in-cause the young lady skips a few years don't mean a thing in our business; the thing I really object to is that I don't want to start any of this war stuff—it's money in it any more. (Shouting)—Sei her up for the parapet scene, boys! We're off in 10 minutes.

THE hostess summoned one of her guests to the lawn to try his luck with the new moon, and said:
"You must hold this silver dollar in your left hand, look at the new moon over your right shoulder, make a wish, and it will come true."

The thing was very quickly done, and they rejoined the party. Later the hos-tess asked if the wish had been made, and, upon being informed that it had, she remarked: "Where is my silver dollar?"

"Oh!" replied the guest. "I wished that I might-keep the silver dollar, and
